2. "All foods were available in Ls, with the exception of southern fruits and caviar. Queues for food were comprised mostly (about 80%) of women from 30 to 50 years old. They wanted mostly meat, but also eggs. They also wanted defective textile goods, / seconds /. The only goods imported from the USSR were sardines.

3. "Wages: a married gardener, with one child, got 1100 new crowns a month. Women employed in gardening received 450 to 620 new crowns a month. Workers on hourly wages were entitled to the following bonuses: up to 1000 kcs a month - 120 kcs; up to 1200 kcs a month - 30 kcs. As chief of the gardening project in [redacted]

[redacted] expenses, per month, were as follows: 850 kcs for [redacted] food; 100 kcs for cigarettes; 30 kcs for incidentals. [redacted]

4. "Housing problems in Ls were unknown. Almost daily examples of single men receiving three-room flats, well-equipped, were evidenced. A three-room flat (two rooms and a kitchen), cost 350 kcs a year in rent. A flat such as this in a new building might cost as much as 450 kcs a year. Worker residences were never checked by the Housing Commission. A worker leaving his flat for more than three days is required to report to the SNB.

5. "Forced transfer of workers in administrative posts to industries had completely ceased in As. Many women who were working in the textile factories were given notice, however. Most of these were women whose husbands were well employed. The employment office is still ordering youths to the Falknov mines, and to the Sokolov Chemical Works. Other youths are ordered from the textile industry to farming; every youth has, after finishing high school, to work in a kolkhoz for two months [redacted] 50X1-HUM
6. "Women are employed in the textile mills and as railway and bus conductors. (About 50% of conductors are women). Most women work of their own volition, for the money.
7. "Workers who participated in the Skoda riots in June 53 were sent to the border area to do agricultural work. For the most part, these went to kolkhozes and State Agricultural Farms, to fill the lack of agricultural workers in the border area.
8. "Every citizen of As was required to work 48 hours a year in a brigade for the improvement of the city. (Some citizens are required to work harvesting potatoes, etc., too). Brigade workers are summoned by loud speaker in the town. Agricultural brigade workers receive regular wages; kolkhozes cannot afford to pay these brigade wages, so wages are paid by the District Soviet. School children have to collect old paper and scrap, and other materials. The selection of workers to enjoy the workers' recreation period in the mountains is done on the basis of political reliability and the number of hours worked, by a given worker, on the 'voluntary' brigades. These workers usually receive better jobs and are backed by the Workers' Council and factory administration.
9. "Soviet moving pictures had poor attendance, in general; but a movie called 'Hero of the Black Sea' was very well received. Czech movies have no political twist. The only Western movies shown in As were French."
